

Archaeology for all for with University of Ferrara and VALUE Project

In line with VALUE project objective of spreading the archaeological culture, a university webinar in live streaming, free and open to general audience, has been launched on February 25.

The webinar, organized in collaboration with University of Ferrara and held by Prof. Rachele Dubbini and PhD Francesca Romana Fiano, will give the possibility to learn the main methods and practices of the archaeological survey, with attention to the archaeological site of Bocca delle Menate in Comacchio and the organization of the survey that will be carried out on site in April 2021.

Identified as a Roman villa on the waters of the Po Delta in 1956, the discover of the site was at obscured by the sensational discovery of the ancient Etruscan city of Spina. The partial publication of the surveys and the renewed interest of the Municipality of Comacchio, which today relies on the innovative setting up of the Ancient Delta Museum, now opens new perspectives for site life, also thanks the activities realized by the University of Ferrara.

The archaeological laboratory of the Roman Villa of Bocca delle Menate in Comacchio will start a new season of investigations that will be carried out by a team of specialists and students. The UniFe archaeological laboratory will also become a precious opportunity to relate to the territory and its community.

Next webinar meeting will take place on March, 4th at 10 a.m.

To attend the webinar click here meet.google.com/kgm-eiep-rky

TOWN OF CRES – Unique Trail Sign

As the process of creating a visual identity of the historical trails of the island Cres is progressing, the Town of Cres has held meetings with stakeholders to discuss the unique trail sign to accompany visitors along the trail and keep them safe and oriented.

It has been decided that the sign behind the historical Cres trail, now under the name Via Apsyrtides, will be a blue and red mark in the shape of the letters VA, where the blue represents the island and the sea, and the red dot reminds the visitors of the standard international hiking trail mark.

During the spring period, a total of 75 km of pathways will be blazed with this VA mark, and a local event to promote the Via Apsyrtides will be held at the end of spring.

Master in Cultural Management MuSeC on starting blocks

The call for the II Level Master in Cultural Management "MuSeC" closed on February, 21st and the educational offer raised lot of interest among professionals in the cultural heritage sector such as archeologists, librarians, officials in the culture and tourism sector who intend to increase their skills as well as young students in communication and art sector.

In a short time, the number of registrations exceeded the number of places available (more than twenty applications received and only eleven enrollment allowed by the VALUE project).

UniFe master management defined MUseC "a great opportunity for students, who already have a high experiential profile and educational background, to attend a Level II Master giving them new and modern skills about management, enhancement and communication of cultural and environmental heritage"

To know more about the Master
<http://www.unife.it/masters/musec>